Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

- SOC / Inland REOC remains activated in support of 2014 Drought

Weather of Concern

- An area of low pressure developing off the Baja CA coast will tap into significant tropical moisture, spreading it northward and into Arizona and southeast California. Moisture will begin increasing Sunday, with the bulk of the moisture arriving Monday and continuing through the day on Tuesday. Scattered to numerous showers, some with heavy rain, will develop area-wide Monday and continue thru Tuesday as the low off Baja ejects inland to the northeast. Embedded thunderstorms with heavy rain are also expected, especially Tuesday afternoon and evening.

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County:

http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/wwa_bc_cal.php

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

A weak warming trend will develop this weekend across interior areas of northwest California as high pressure builds aloft. Coastal areas will remain more seasonal with patchy fog in the morning and clearing each afternoon. High pressure will maintain dry weather through the middle of next week before a shortwave brings the next potential for precipitation.

Medford Weather:

An upper level ridge builds over the region with temperatures increasing almost ten degrees over the next several days. With the higher low temperatures as well frost should be isolated on the east side Sunday morning and more so Monday morning. The upper level ridge flattens on Sunday evening into Monday morning with a weak short wave bringing a slight chance of rain on the west side from the Umpqua Divide northward. Models are in fairly good agreement with an upper trough deepening offshore and bringing successive fronts through the region Thursday into next weekend.

Reno Weather:

High pressure remains over the region with dry conditions and a warming trend through the weekend. Winds become slightly breezy Monday and Tuesday afternoons ahead of a weak cold front with cooler temperatures expected later next week.

San Francisco Weather:

Warm to hot weather develops today across the Bay Area with light offshore flow. Hot weather peaks Sunday with record breaking highs possible. Increasing clouds arrive from the south Monday with a few degrees of cooling and a slight chance of showers over the San Benito Hills later Monday night into Tuesday morning. More seasonable temperatures return Tuesday through Friday with dry weather as onshore winds return.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

Dry weather continues with daytime temperatures well above normal this weekend, peaking on Sunday. Expect a slow cooling trend early next week with near normal temperatures again for the second half of the week.

Hanford Weather:

Temperatures will warm to well above normal over the weekend. Dry weather is expected across the central California interior through Monday. Next week tropical moisture will move northward into the region bringing a threat of thunderstorms to parts of the area.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Temperatures will be well above normal in most areas this weekend. Some increase in moisture could allow for an afternoon or evening thunderstorm in the desert and eastern mountains Sunday. Increasing subtropical moisture lifting northward into the region may bring more widespread showers and possible thunderstorms to the area Monday through early Wednesday. Drier weather is expected later Wednesday through Friday.

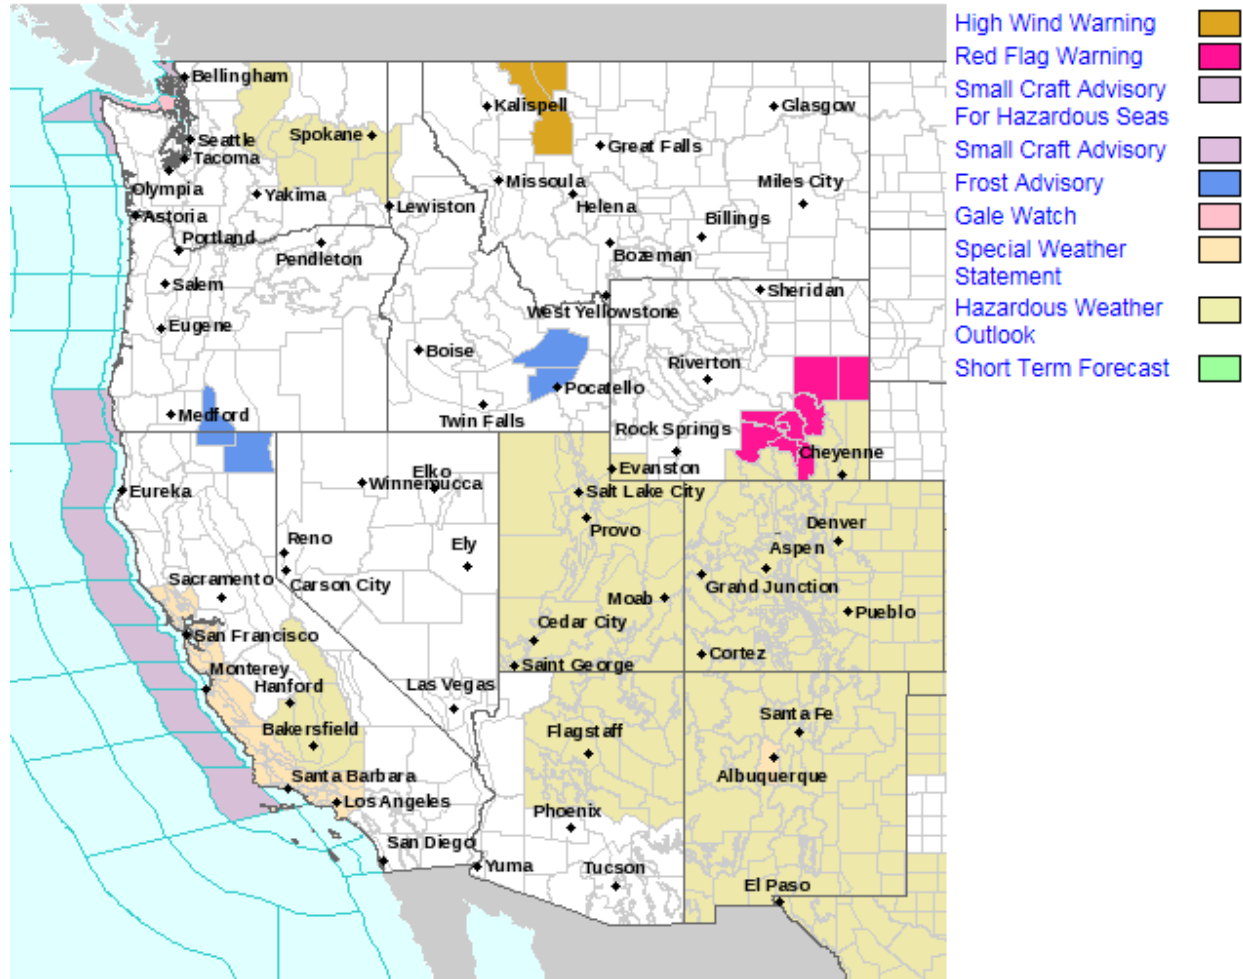

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

Building high pressure aloft will bring warmer days through Sunday. Humidity increases by Monday as subtropical moisture moves in from the south. A few showers and thunderstorms could develop on Sunday, but they appear more likely Monday and Tuesday as a low pressure trough approaches from the southwest. Locally heavy rainfall is possible. The trough will move east on Wednesday with warm, dry, seasonal weather to wrap up the week.

Southeast California Weather:

Expect light winds, clear skies and dry conditions through the weekend with above normal temperatures. Showers and thunderstorms will make a return to the area early next week as tropical moisture pushes into the area.
